You Are the Goal: Become the Person Your Life Is Waiting For

Table of contents

You Are the Goal: Become the Person Your Life Is Waiting For

Table of contents

Welcome — And Why I Made This For You

What's waiting on the other side of this work

Your Journey Map: The 5 steps to goal mastery and lasting fulfilment

Section 1: Where Have You Been

Your Proven Success

Step 1: List your top 5 accomplishments

Step 2: Feel the victory — Emotional reflection

Step 3: Uncover the patterns — Deeper insights

Step 4: Gratitude & anchor statement

Section 2: The Wheel of Life

Assessing Your Life's Balance

The 8 categories

Step 1: Define your ideal vision

Step 2: Rate your current reality (1–10)

Step 3: Draw your wheel

Step 4: Reflect on your current life balance

Section 3: Your 10-Year Vision

Unleashing Your Deepest Desires

Rules for this exercise

Your 10-Year Vision List

Section 4: How You View the Future

Prioritizing Your Vision

Step 1: Assign time horizons

Step 2: Count your time horizons

Step 3: Categorize your goals by Wheel of Life areas

Reflection

Section 5: Becoming the Person

Your Future Identity

Step 1: Select your top priorities

Step 2: Envision the future you

Step 3: Write your future identity vision

Section 6: Crafting Your Goal

From Desire to Committed Action

Goal Sheet 1

Why is this goal important to me?

Goal Sheet 2

Why is this goal important to me?

Goal Sheet 3

Why is this goal important to me?

Goal Sheet 4

Why is this goal important to me?

You did the work. That matters.

A note from Jason

Want to do this work together?

Welcome — And Why I Made This For You

Jason St Gelais | stgelaisleadership.com

I know what it feels like to be capable and lost at the same time. For years, I moved through jobs, roles, and responsibilities — always working hard, always showing up — but never quite landing in a place that felt like mine. I had a family I loved and a work ethic that never quit, but somewhere underneath it all was a quiet, persistent feeling: I'm made for more than this, and I don't know how to find it.

Layoffs tested me. Indecision cost me years. Raising five kids while trying to figure out who I was professionally meant that career clarity often got pushed to tomorrow. And tomorrow kept moving. At 31 I went back to school at night to earn my IT degree. At 50 I finished an MBA and a Master's in Leadership. And somewhere in that second chapter, the questions I'd been avoiding finally became ones I couldn't ignore: Why do I do what I do? What do I actually want? Those two questions changed everything.

I didn't find the answers in a flash of inspiration. I found them through a process — honest reflection, clear vision, and the identity work that actually makes goals stick. This guide is that process, built into five sections you can work through at your own pace. I'm not handing you a motivational poster. I'm handing you the framework I wish someone had put in front of me twenty years ago.

Take your time with it. Be more honest than feels comfortable. And know this — the fact that you're here, doing this work, already puts you ahead of where I was for a long time. Let's go find your direction.

— Jason St Gelais

What’s waiting on the other side of this work

I remember the day I stopped feeling busy and started feeling purposeful. It wasn’t a dramatic moment. It was quiet. I sat down, did the kind of honest reflection this guide will ask of you, and for the first time in years I could see clearly — not just what I wanted, but who I was trying to become and why it actually mattered.

That clarity changes everything. Not because life suddenly gets easy, but because you stop wasting energy on the wrong things. You wake up knowing what you’re building. You make decisions faster. The people around you notice something different — a steadiness, a direction.

That’s what this guide is designed to give you. Not a to-do list. Not another set of goals that fade by February. A real foundation — the kind built from honest reflection, a clear picture of where you are now, and a vision of the person you’re genuinely becoming. Five sections. One honest conversation with yourself. And on the other side of it, the momentum that comes from finally knowing exactly where you’re headed.

Your Journey Map: The 5 steps to goal mastery and lasting fulfilment

- 1. Where have you been — Your proven capacity for success: Begin by looking back with honesty and gratitude — remember your wins, strengths, and resilience you’ve already shown.
- 2. The Wheel of Life — Assess your current balance: Gain a clear snapshot of where life feels strong and where it’s wobbling. This honest mirror reveals exactly where small changes create the biggest ripple effects.
- 3. The 10-Year Vision — Unleash your deepest desires: Allow yourself to dream without limits — uncovering what you truly desire for your life.
- 4. How We View the Future — Prioritize what matters most: Focus in on your desires and create priorities. Use your natural patterns to make intentional choices.
- 5. Becoming the Person — Your future identity: Shift from what I want to who I must become. This is where clear goals become identity.

Future →
← Past

Section 1: Where Have You Been

Your Proven Success

Before setting bold new directions, you must first acknowledge the evidence of your ability to achieve. Reflection on past accomplishments rewires your self-view from “I hope I can” to “I already have — many times.” Use the prompts below exactly as written to honor your original thoughts and to ground your confidence.

Step 1: List your top 5 accomplishments

Think back over your life — personal, professional, relationships, hobbies, challenges overcome. No accomplishment is too small or too big. Select five things you are genuinely proud of — moments where you showed resilience, skill, courage, or growth. Be specific and vivid for maximum impact.

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

4. _____

5. _____

Step 2: Feel the victory — Emotional reflection

For each accomplishment, close your eyes for 30–60 seconds and relive the moment. How did your body feel? What emotions flooded in? Who were you in that moment — what qualities did you embody? Write down 1–2 key feelings or qualities for each.

1. _____

2. _____

3. _____

4. _____

5. _____

Step 3: Uncover the patterns — Deeper insights

Now look at the five items as a whole. What common themes or strengths show up repeatedly? What environment or mindset helped these successes happen? How do these past wins prove you already have what it takes for bigger goals?

_____

_____

_____

Step 4: Gratitude & anchor statement

Choose one accomplishment that stands out most. Write: "I am grateful for [accomplishment] because it showed me I am capable of [quality/strength]." This becomes your anchor — a quick reminder of your proven capacity whenever doubt creeps in.

_____

_____

_____

“

We are what we repeatedly do. Excellence, then, is not an act, but a habit.

Will Durant

Section 2: The Wheel of Life

Assessing Your Life's Balance

The Wheel of Life is the gold-standard tool used by top coaches and executives worldwide. It provides a visual snapshot of how balanced your life is across key areas. A smooth wheel rolls forward easily; an uneven one wobbles and struggles. We'll assess your current reality and ideal vision across 8 categories.

The 8 categories

- Career / Professional
- Finances / Money
- Health / Physical Well-Being
- Relationships / Family & Friends
- Personal Growth / Learning
- Fun / Recreation / Leisure
- Spirituality / Purpose / Faith
- Environment / Home & Surroundings

Step 1: Define your ideal vision

Close your eyes and vividly imagine your perfect life in each of the categories. Be bold, specific, and unapologetic. Write 1–3 sentences for each.

Career / Professional:

_____

_____

Finances / Money:

_____

_____

Health / Physical & Well-Being:

_____

_____

Relationships / Family & Friends:

_____

_____

Personal Growth / Learning:

_____

_____

Fun / Recreation / Leisure:

_____

_____

Spirituality / Purpose / Faith:

_____

_____

Environment / Home & Surroundings:

_____

_____

Step 2: Rate your current reality (1–10)

Honestly assess how close you are today to that ideal. Write the number and a brief reason for each. 1–3 = major gap. 4–6 = moderate gap. 7–9 = strong but not ideal. 10 = fully living your ideal.

1. Career / Professional: __ / 10

Reason: _____

2. Finances / Money: __ / 10

Reason: _____

3. Health / Physical & Well-Being: __ / 10

Reason: _____

4. Relationships / Family & Friends: __ / 10

Reason: _____

5. Personal Growth / Learning: __ / 10

Reason: _____

6. Fun / Recreation / Leisure: __ / 10

Reason: _____

7. Spirituality / Purpose / Faith: __ / 10

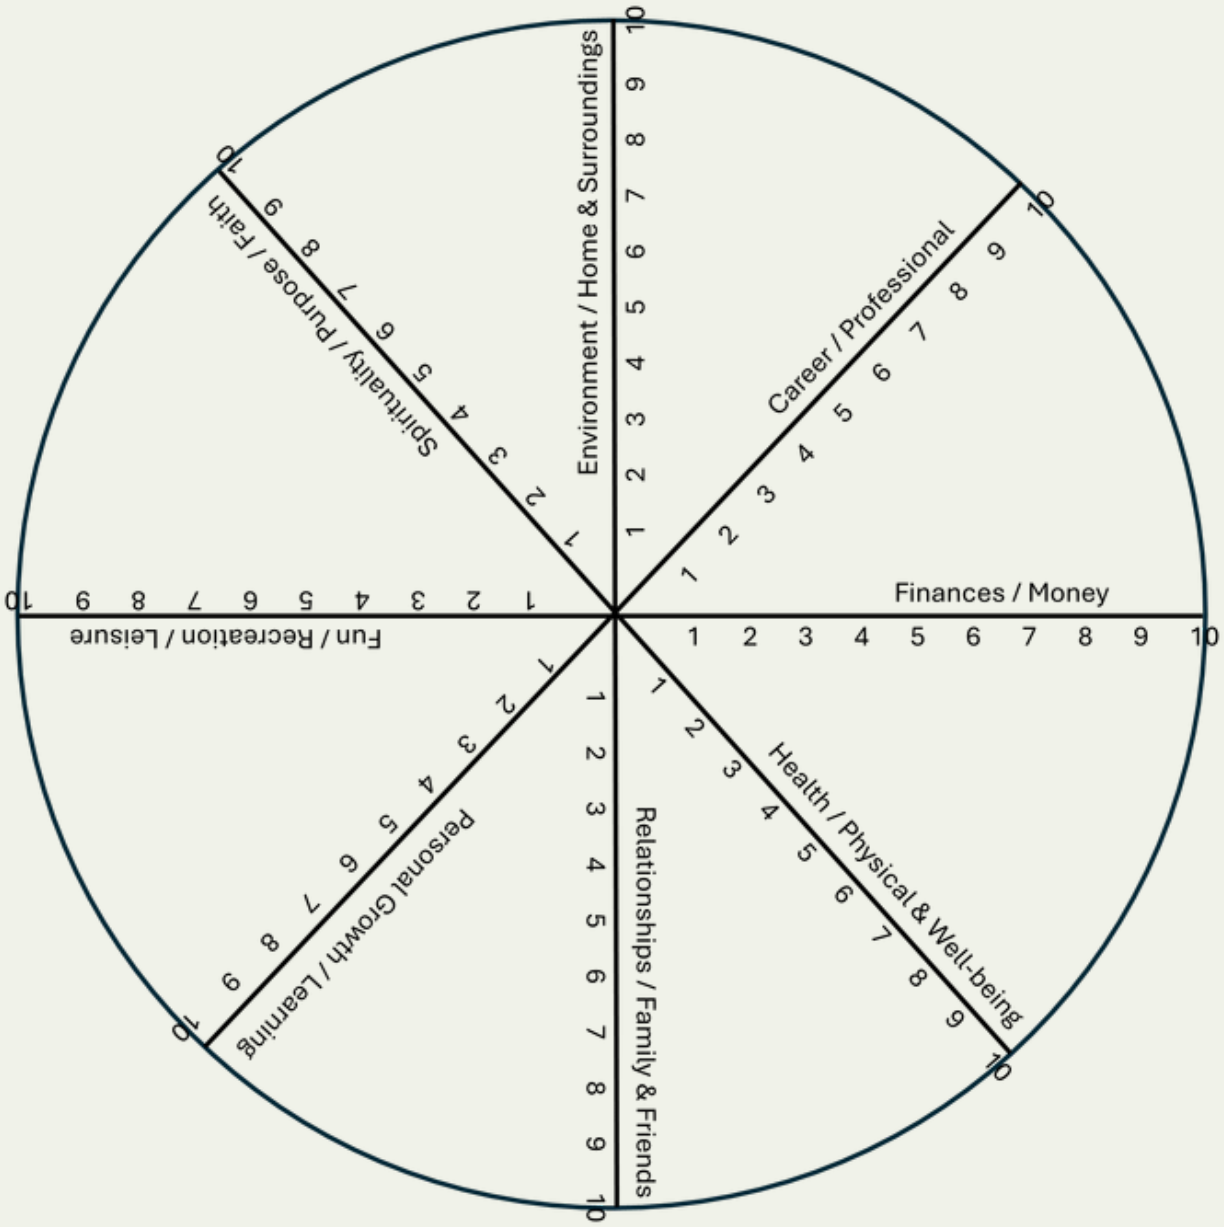
Reason: _____

8. Environment / Home & Surroundings: __ / 10

Reason: _____

Step 3: Draw your wheel

On the blank 8-spoke Wheel of Life diagram, plot each rating from the center (0) to the outer edge (10). Connect the dots to see your current wheel.



“

Life is like riding a bicycle. To keep your balance, you must keep moving.

Albert Einstein

Step 4: Reflect on your current life balance

1. What patterns do you see that explain your current life's balance?

_____

2. For any high rated category: What concrete evidence supports this score? Would someone who knows you well agree? What has it cost you to reach this level?

_____

3. If your entire wheel is low and even (e.g., all 3's-5's), does if feel “balanced” or “stuck” , What story are you telling yourself about why life is "just okay"?

_____

4. For a low-scoring areas: How would a trusted friend rate it? What's the difference between their view and yours?

_____

5. If you raised just one spoke by 2-3 points in the next 90 days, which one would create the biggest ripple effect across your life?

_____

Section 3: Your 10-Year Vision

Unleashing Your Deepest Desires

Now we shift from reflection to bold creation. The goal here is to empty your mind onto the page — no filters, no limitations, no self-censorship. Most people never allow themselves to dream big because they immediately judge what's "realistic." Here, we suspend all judgment. Imagine a world where time, money, resources, health, and circumstances are perfectly aligned — what would you truly want in the next 10 years?

Rules for this exercise

- Aim for at least 50 goals, dreams, experiences, or aspirations. Don't stop until you hit 50 — even if some feel silly, extravagant, or "impossible."
- Include everything: places to visit, skills to master, people to meet, habits to build or break, experiences to have, contributions to make, feelings to cultivate.
- Focus on the "why" behind recurring desires — write the deeper desire, not just the task.
- No editing, no limiting beliefs — let your imagination run free. The real insights emerge when you push past the first 20–30 items.

"

If you want to be happy, set a goal that commands your thoughts, liberates your energy, and inspires your hopes.

Andrew Carnegie

Your 10-Year Vision List

Write as many as you can — aim for 50 or more. If you think of it, write it down. Don’t leave any loose thoughts for later.

- 1. _____
- 2. _____
- 3. _____
- 4. _____
- 5. _____
- 6. _____
- 7. _____
- 8. _____
- 9. _____
- 10. _____
- 11. _____
- 12. _____
- 13. _____
- 14. _____
- 15. _____
- 16. _____
- 17. _____
- 18. _____
- 19. _____
- 20. _____
- 21. _____
- 22. _____
- 23. _____
- 24. _____
- 25. _____

"People with goals succeed because they know where they’re going." — Earl Nightingale

- 26. _____
- 27. _____
- 28. _____
- 29. _____
- 30. _____
- 31. _____
- 32. _____
- 33. _____
- 34. _____
- 35. _____
- 36. _____
- 37. _____
- 38. _____
- 39. _____
- 40. _____
- 41. _____
- 42. _____
- 43. _____
- 44. _____
- 45. _____
- 46. _____
- 47. _____
- 48. _____
- 49. _____
- 50. _____

Section 4: How You View the Future

Prioritizing Your Vision

Now that you have your 10-Year Vision List, it's time to bring structure and timeline to your desires. This section helps you see how you naturally think about time and balance — are you focused on immediate wins, long-term legacy, or scattered across categories?

Step 1: Assign time horizons

Go back to your list of 50 goals and write one of the following next to each:

- 1 — Achievable in about 1 year or less
- 3 — Achievable in about 3 years
- 5 — Achievable in about 5 years
- 10 — Achievable in about 10 years or more

Step 2: Count your time horizons

#1's ____ #3's ____ #5's ____ #10's ____

Step 3: Categorize your goals by Wheel of Life areas

Assign each goal to one of the 8 Wheel of Life categories. Count how many fall into each:

- 1. Career / Professional: ____
- 2. Finances / Money: ____
- 3. Health / Physical & Well-Being: ____
- 4. Relationships / Family & Friends: ____
- 5. Personal Growth / Learning: ____
- 6. Fun / Recreation / Leisure: ____
- 7. Spirituality / Purpose / Faith: ____
- 8. Environment / Home & Surroundings: ____

Time Horizon Balance

Take a moment to reflect on what your distribution reveals about how you naturally think about the future.

- A lot of 1's and 3's → You have strong short-term focus and a gift for momentum. You thrive on quick wins and immediate action. The opportunity here is to ensure some longer-term vision isn't being overlooked.
- A lot of 10's → You are a natural visionary with inspiring long-term thinking. You see the big picture clearly and dream boldly. The growth area is bringing some of that vision into the present — breaking big dreams into actionable steps so they don't stay "someday" forever.
- A balanced spread → You have a healthy perspective that blends now and the future. You're able to act today while keeping your eyes on the horizon.

Category Balance (Wheel of Life Alignment)

How are your goals distributed across the 8 categories.

- Balanced distribution (goals spread across most/all categories) → Your vision supports a well-rounded life.
- Heavy focus on one or two categories Great for short-term intensity and progress in those areas, but long-term imbalance can lead to burnout, strained relationships, or regret in neglected parts of life.
- Gaps in key areas These are signals to explore why. Neglecting any category long-term can drain energy and create unintended consequences.

Reflection

Take a moment to sit with your time horizons and category distribution. Ask yourself:

What story does my distribution tell about how I approach life right now?

_____

_____

Which category stands out as most neglected, and what might that be costing me emotionally or practically?

_____

_____

If I made one small, intentional shift — what could open up in the next 90 days?

_____

_____

Section 5: Becoming the Person

Your Future Identity

Years ago, standing at my father's funeral, I asked myself a question that stopped me cold: If I had one last thing to say to him, what would it be? What came wasn't a list of things he'd accomplished. It wasn't his job title or his income or his credentials. It was who he was — the kind of man he'd become through decades of quiet persistence, faith, and showing up for his family even when life made it hard. That was his legacy. Not what he did. Who he was.

That moment planted something in me that took years to fully understand: goals are not the destination. The person you become in pursuit of them is. Most goal-setting stops at the "what" — what do I want, what do I need, what will I achieve. This section goes somewhere different. It asks the harder, more important question: Who must I become to live the life I just described? This is where everything shifts. Because when you know who you're becoming — not just what you're chasing — your goals stop feeling like tasks on a list and start feeling like steps toward a version of yourself you genuinely want to meet. That's the work we're doing here. And it's the most important work in this entire guide.

Step 1: Select your top priorities

Go back to your 10-Year Vision List. Read through every item slowly. Then choose 3–4 that stop you — the ones that make your chest tighten a little, the ones that feel most true to who you're becoming. Put a star ★ next to each. These are your guiding stars for now.

Step 2: Envision the future you

Close your eyes and give yourself a full minute here — don't rush it. Imagine yourself 10 years from now, having lived into these goals and many others. Ask yourself two questions and sit with them: What type of person must I become to achieve all I truly want? Who will I be when these goals are already mine? Notice the details. How do you carry yourself — your posture, your calm, your presence? What qualities define you — discipline, compassion, resilience, wisdom? How do others experience you? What does your morning look like? What have you stopped doing that used to hold you back?

Step 3: Write your future identity vision

Now write it down. First person. Present tense. As if you are already that person today. Don’t write a goal list. Write a portrait. Describe how you feel when you wake up, how you make decisions, how you treat the people around you, what you no longer tolerate, what you’ve built. Make it vivid enough that reading it back gives you a feeling — because that feeling is the compass.

Example: "I am a man who moves through the day with quiet confidence. I know what I’m building and why it matters. I make time for the people I love without guilt, because I’ve built a life that has room for them. I’m not chasing direction anymore — I’ve found it."

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

— What you just wrote is not a daydream. It is a description of someone who already exists inside you — someone who has been waiting for you to stop asking “what do I want” long enough to ask “who am I becoming.” Keep this close. Read it on the hard days. Let it be the standard you hold yourself to — not with pressure, but with the quiet knowledge that you know exactly who you’re walking toward.

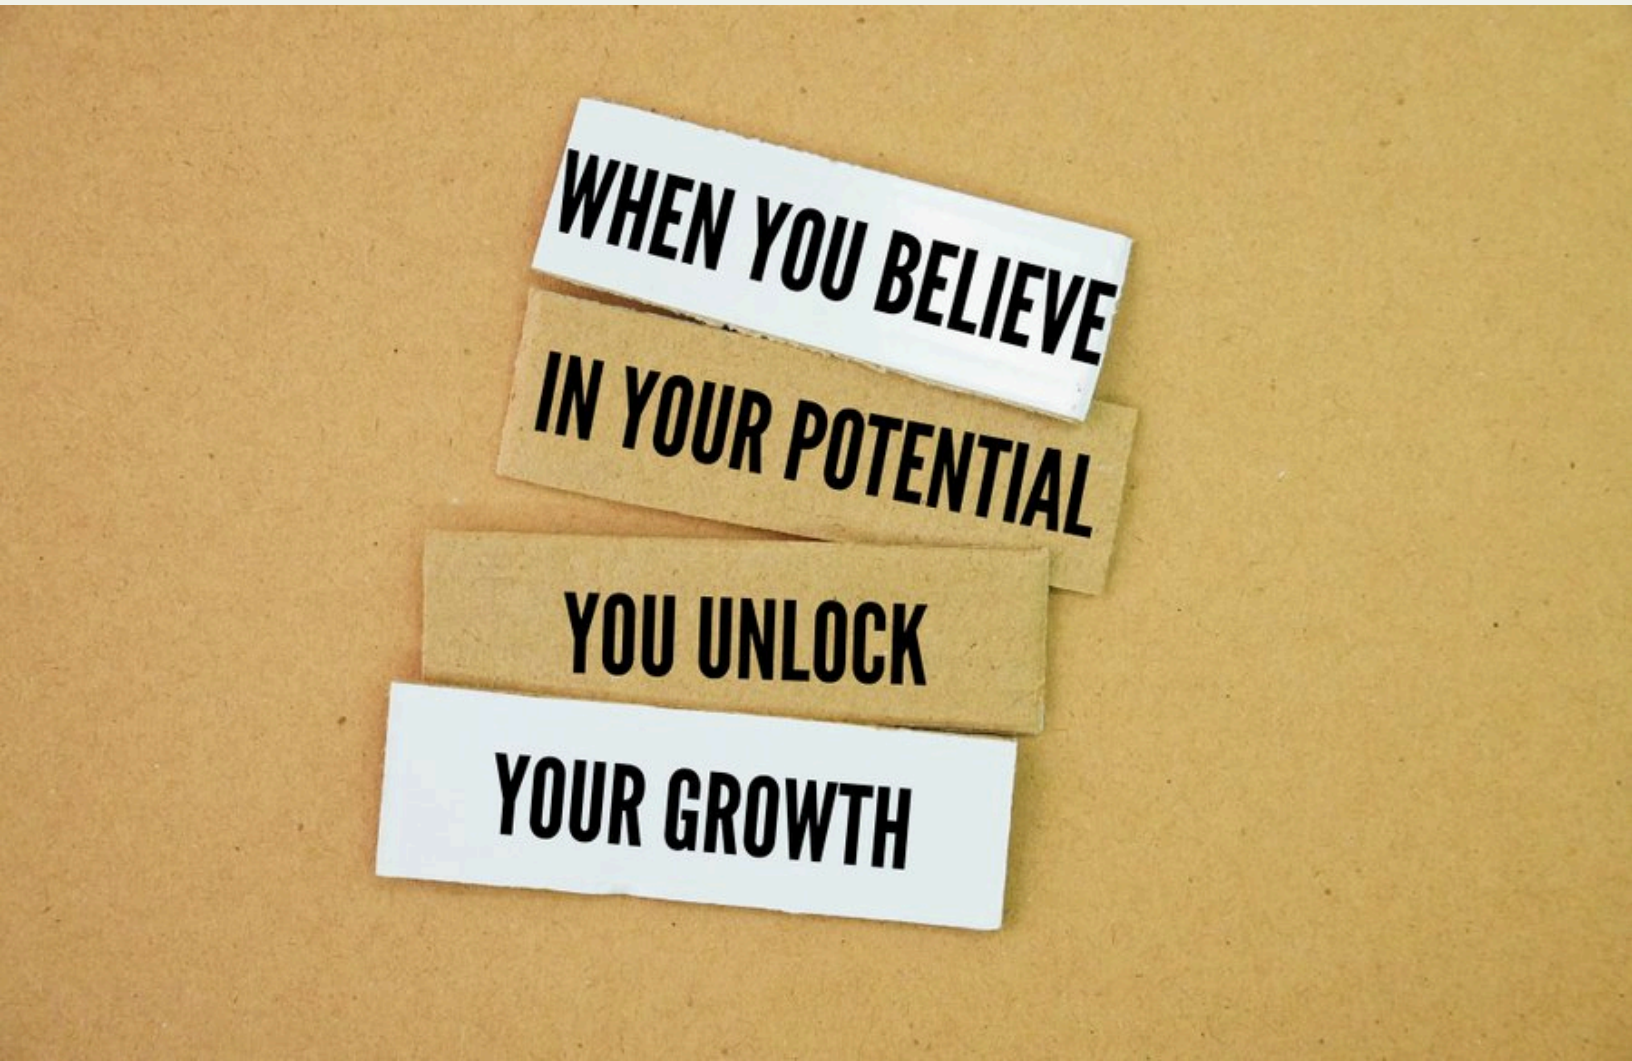
> “The major reason for setting a goal is for what it makes of you to accomplish it. What it makes of you will always be the far greater value than what you get.

Jim Rohn

Section 6: Crafting Your Goal

From Desire to Committed Action

You've identified your top 3–4 starred goals from your 10-Year Vision List — the ones that light you up most, the ones that make your heart race when you read them. Now we turn those dreams into reality. A goal without a deep, heartfelt "why" fades the moment challenges appear. That's why we use the 5 Whys technique. By asking "Why is this goal important to me?" at least five times, you drill past surface reasons to the emotional core that keeps you going when motivation dips. Complete one Goal Sheet for each of your starred goals.



Goal Sheet 1

Goal: _____

Why is this goal important to me?

Why #1:_____

Why #2: _____

Why #3: _____

Why #4: _____

Why #5: _____

Core emotional "Why" (the deepest reason that fires you up):

_____

_____

Who will I be when I accomplish this goal?

_____

_____

What are potential barriers?

_____

_____

What resources are needed?

_____

_____

How do I measure progress?

_____

_____

Goal Sheet 2

Goal: _____

Why is this goal important to me?

Why #1:_____

Why #2: _____

Why #3: _____

Why #4: _____

Why #5: _____

Core emotional "Why" (the deepest reason that fires you up):

_____

_____

Who will I be when I accomplish this goal?

_____

_____

What are potential barriers?

_____

_____

What resources are needed?

_____

_____

How do I measure progress?

_____

_____

Goal Sheet 3

Goal: _____

Why is this goal important to me?

Why #1:_____

Why #2: _____

Why #3: _____

Why #4: _____

Why #5: _____

Core emotional "Why" (the deepest reason that fires you up):

_____

_____

Who will I be when I accomplish this goal?

_____

_____

What are potential barriers?

_____

_____

What resources are needed?

_____

_____

How do I measure progress?

_____

_____

Goal Sheet 4

Goal: _____

Why is this goal important to me?

Why #1:_____

Why #2: _____

Why #3: _____

Why #4: _____

Why #5: _____

Core emotional "Why" (the deepest reason that fires you up):

_____

_____

Who will I be when I accomplish this goal?

_____

_____

What are potential barriers?

_____

_____

What resources are needed?

_____

_____

How do I measure progress?

_____

_____

You did the work. That matters.

Most people never get this far. And I mean that sincerely — not as a compliment to make you feel good, but as a real observation. Honest reflection is hard. Looking clearly at where you are, naming what's missing, letting yourself want something bigger than what you've settled for — most people find a reason to skip that part. You didn't.

So before you close this guide, I want you to take a breath and actually feel what you just did. You looked back at your life and found real evidence that you're capable — more than you probably give yourself credit for. You got honest about where things are out of balance. You let yourself dream without immediately talking yourself out of it. And you started to see something that's easy to miss when life is moving fast — not just what you want, but who you're becoming. That's the part that changes everything. That is real work. And it's the beginning of real change.

A note from Jason

Hey — I just want to say, genuinely, I'm proud of you for doing this. I know what it took. I know because I put off this exact kind of work for years. Life was full — jobs that came and went, always something more urgent than sitting down and asking myself, what I actually wanted. And so I didn't. Not really. Not honestly.

The afternoon I finally did, nothing dramatic happened. I just got quiet, did the work, and wrote down some things I'd been afraid to admit I wanted. But something shifted. I could see a little further. I knew a little more clearly who I was trying to become. And the next morning I got up differently. That's what I hope you're feeling right now — even just a little of it. That small, quiet shift. Because that's where everything starts.

Keep your goal sheets somewhere you'll actually see them. Read your identity vision when things get hard. And if you ever want to do this work together — with someone who will ask you the real questions and stick with you through the answers — come find me. I'd love to walk this with you.

Talk soon,

Jason St Gelais

stgelaisleadership.com

Want to do this work together?

The self-guided version of this workshop is a real start. But if you want someone in your corner — asking the deeper questions, helping you stay honest, keeping you moving when motivation dips — that's what the 5-Day Goal Mastery Challenge is for. Five days. Just focused work with someone who has been exactly where you are.

- A crystal-clear vision you actually believe in
- Your top goals anchored to a deep, unshakeable why
- A prioritized action plan for the next 90 days
- The confidence that comes from finally knowing your next step

Spots are limited — I keep it small so it stays genuinely personal. If this feels like your next step, I'd love to hear from you. Reserve your free spot at: stgelaisleadership.com